Subject: Event report (Visit to Orphanage)

A week ago this opportunity was received by the energetic Leos in a confident and enthusiastic manner. Numerous ideas came in so as to create a plan on what will the Leo Club Elite Horizonites do at the orphanage and at what time, But as we all know the best plans are created when we are in the situation. Let's go over from the beginning.

Half the ideas were scratched out because of time constraints, some were thought over again by Leos due to the fact that young Leos would be managing an over-enthusiastic set of children from the age group of 3-18 and then remaining ideas such as dancing, singing, drawing competition and delivery of speech were shortlisted. Each event of course, consisting some mouth watering treats for the children just to give them the tinge of competitiveness for top 3 positions.

But of course, the children turned out to be ardently cute and three times the enthusiasm we had imagined them to be at. Therefore costing us to turn in all the treats to them during the competition instead at the time of results, Trust me none like to stand between chocolates and ardently cute kids.

Leo club Elite Horizonites reached the orphanage at 10:30 AM. An excited batch of Leos entered Jeevitha Ashrama which was greeted by an overwhelming response from the children of Ashram. For some reason the children felt that they were going to be extra loved today, And nothing less did occur. I remember the children standing next to the wall eagerly awaiting our presence and once we did enter the ashram. We were bombarded by kids asking to be carried around, hugged while I stood and saw as to how the energetic Leos seemed to remove the shyness characteristic of many introvert kids that would just not mingle with the rest. But our Leos seemingly made the mass to mingle around with each of the Leos.

All the tiny tots were eager to hear what Leo Kavya had to say to them.

After a long session of face paints and badging them with the National Flag, which seemed to actually attract the kids totally because they were curious to know as what a face paint would feel like and what other surprises did the “Annas” and “Akkas” get for them.

There was a surprise dance performance by our multi-talented President Leo Subramani and Treasurer Leo Sharanya. Trust me they were good but to my surprise the kids were phenomenal in their solo and group dance performances, I mean they went all out and made me feel like I was attending a Sangeet ceremony wherein the girls were challenging the boys and vice versa. Moreover when they all performed together, they seemed to just have beautiful coordination with each other and also went in sync with each beat for their age.

The kids rightfully turning the tables!

Then of course came the best part which was the drawing competition in which the energetic Leos thought they were helping novice artists draw but instead the kids were ordering the Leos to not disturb them while they were in their zone of art. Kids using water colours, sketching, drawing national flag, drawing scenery and what not. I remember 6-7 kids gathered around me while I helped out a kid draw the National Flag which irked the kids to come and jump at me, This made me feel like I was a kid of 2nd standard. Trust me this was a fun and interactive session.

Do not disturb us while we are in our zone unless you have chocolates.

Then the results of the drawing competition came out, which looked to cheer few of the children but ended in a sorrow yet happy ending for the children. Since our overwhelmed Leos could not see any child in sadness therefore resorted to any means to bring a glee on their face.

The results are out!

But there is a special mention for a kid named Bhuvan. That to no one's surprise took away the attention after such a cute face seemed to order any of the Leos to pick him and carry him around.

Leo Vishnu and Bhuvan say cheese!!!

I would like to end this report by stating that this was a very grateful experience organised by our college New Horizon College, Kasturinagar. Moreover grateful are the members and PSTs of Leo Club Elite Horizonites for the opportunity of spending a day with the funny, ardently cute and sweet children of Jeevitha Ashrama.
